"Build-Up" Good News For Suffering Women

Much of women's periodic distress may be unnecessary. Many who suffer from headaches, nervousness, cramp-like pain, other symptoms of functional dysmenorrhea due to menstruation are helped by CARDUI.

Males way it helps relieve periodic distress is by increasing appetite and flow of gastric juice. Thus it opens up the digestive tract, relieves constipation, and thus relieves the periodic distress.

Others find help for periodic distress this way: Start a few days before and take CARDUI until the "heat" has passed. Women have used CARDUI more than 50 years.

FEED RECORDS REVEAL COSTS

Lead the Way to Improving Farming Practices.

By S. B. CLELAND

The farmer who wants to study his farm business should not overlook the importance of good records of feed consumption by his live stock. Along with the cash and the record of the information on feed use will help show the way to improvement in practices from year to year.

Records of feed consumption are usually kept on groups of live stock rather than on individual animals. In practice the operator observes carefully the amount of feed eaten in a day, and on this basis estimates the quantity fed in a month. In the record book, one page is assigned to each class of live stock, with different columns for the different feeds.

It is a good plan to check once in a while on the estimates by comparing the feed fed to the actual feed consumed. This can be done by weighing the feed at the time it is fed to the animals.

By placing a value on his feed as he goes along, the farmer can readily figure his feed record in cost per pound of gain for meat animals and cost per unit produced by dairy animals.

In order to study his feed records intelligently, the operator must have standards with which to compare his own results. Good testing records supply convenient yardsticks for the dairyman. Co-operative farm management groups use the average for standards in the various classifications.

Files of the county agent's office usually contain records of various feeding trials which afford good standards for comparison. The farmer who wishes to evaluate his records can do so conveniently by consulting the county agent and assembling a set of standards applicable to his own type of farming.

Farm Machine Sales Show Big Increase

Comparative study of the farm situation since 1933 with the five-year period preceding the World War reveals that current purchases of farm machinery and motor vehicles has doubled those made in the early period.

The great increase was made in the purchases of motor vehicles, while expenditures for other farm machinery averaged about the same.

The number of horses and mules on farms was reduced from 25 to 15 million head and the number of hired laborers employed was about 13 per cent lower than in the pre-war years. The number of farms is about 10 per cent greater, the acreage cultivated has increased, and agricultural production is materially greater than it was.

History Moved, Not Man

Alexander Scheffer, lived from birth to death within an area of three blocks in the town of Schaffersville, Pa., and still was a resident of four different counties. He was born in Chester county, married in Lancaster county, died in Dauphin county and was buried in Lebanon county.

The territory in which he lived was subdivided from 1712 to 1763, thus accounting for the changes. Historical researchers said.

Conventional Meetings Best
